DAY CARE NEEDS EXPLORED

The feasibility of a day care center for University of Nebraska at Omaha students has sporadically slipped up into the lower ranks of administrative priorities over the last two and a half years.

The interest in day care facilities for the children of UNO students, and possibly faculty and staff, has suddenly mushroomed since the announcement of the proposed change in the funding regulations for Title 4A of the Social Securities Act.

Five Omaha day care centers where a number of UNO students send their children during the school hours receive 75% of their funding from Title 4A. The other 25% comes from private sources.

According to possible new regulations, the 25% matching funds from private sources would have to come from public sources and the definitions of "past" and "present" welfare recipients would change to leave out many of the UNO mothers.

Neither Douglas County Social Services nor the Omaha office of the Nebraska Department of Welfare is certain when or if the proposal will become policy but they have anticipated the end of the fiscal year, July 31, as the changing date. The day care centers as well as other 4A recipients have been advised to prepare for the prospective cutback.

According to Christine Hanus, program analyst for the Nebraska Department of Welfare, the proposed changes were announced in January and the public was given the opportunity to respond to the would-be modifications. She says, however, that local officials are "still up in the air" as to the public feedback.

But welfare executives are not the only ones left without answers. With the fate of the five centers in question, UNO students and interested persons are forced to organize, consolidate their research, and turn to the university for help.

Jackie Meazell, whose four and a half year-old daughter Cherisse attends one of the 4A-funded centers, says school will be impossible for her should the center close.

Ms. Meazell has taken it upon herself to join the ranks of past UNO day care spokeswomen and lobby for the service.

"I and a few friends don't really represent any group," she expressed, "but our immediate goal is to unite splinter groups and needy women who feel that day care is a legitimate student service."

The student is presently planning an open discussion of funding and facilities possibilities. The discussion will feature on and off-campus speakers (not

Executive Candidates Offer Personal Views on Campaign

For this last day of the elections, the Gateway asked the candidates to respond, in their own writing, on what they thought were the major factors of their campaigns. The candidates are: Dave Parker and Kristin Grady; Dan Haley and Randy Whiting; and Rusty Schwartz and Tom McCormick.

Parker — Grady

By Kristin Grady

As candidate for student body vice-president, and not yet knowing its outcome, I would like to use this space to express my impressions of this election.

Looking back, one question looms in my mind; is it a mistake to be involved or just to become part of an unhealthy situation?

Dave and I began this campaign with a perhaps naive point of view — that we could rise above the political wheelings and dealings that have bogged down student government this year. I envisioned a mutually respectful organization working for the good of other students — a real political pie in the sky.

Since, reality has intervened with a fat thumb.

We have been attacked throughout for insufficient reasons for running, copying platforms, making deals, buying votes, and other generally subversive activities. When we simply deny such allegations, we hear a-ha! no explanation, and another ulterior motive is attributed.

It disheartens me to see basically idealistic, well-meaning students revert to mud-slinging and power-plays that mean little except to those few who insist upon taking them seriously.

I refuse, along with most of the student body, to take them seriously.

It is not the issues which are specifically at stake in this election, it is the ideologies. Dave and I still stand for change; and for the most part, the people who have helped us in this campaign have made a step towards that goal.

I have seen people involved and caring who have never given student government a second thought — except in mockery. I would hate to let them down.

Haley — Whiting

By Dan Haley

Throughout the campaign for the Presidency and Vice-Presidency of the UNO student body, Randy

Whiting and I have emphasized the need for open channels of communication between the Student Government and the student body. We continue to feel that if students are properly approached and confronted with issues which concern them, they will react with the interest and support which is necessary to maintain a strong Student Government.

The need for improved communications is exemplified by the general lack of publicity received by the executive elections this year. Rusty Schwartz has said that he sees no need to use student funds to promote Student Government, but it is our belief that the funds suffer far greater misuse when they are administered by an organization that is not backed by the students of UNO. Only by adequate promotion and communication can the Student Government become a fair representative of its voting public.

Our opponents have pointed out many needs lacking attention at UNO, but they offer few if any concrete proposals for meeting those needs. Why? Because without first gaining large scale support by the student body, they know they can do little but voice empty promises. We too recognize the problems which need attention, but we also know that student support must be gained first. Therefore, we have stated eight steps in our platform that should be undertaken by the Student Government to reach and inform the people it represents. The steps include: Operation of a telephone network linking various campus organizations with the Student Government. Establishment of a Presidential cabinet consisting of representatives of the multiple political strata on campus. Opening of a television channel devoted to Student Government on the closed circuit system to be installed throughout the campus this fall. We also propose publication of an executive flyer to inform students on issues of concern to them, combined with supplemental news spots on WSPO.

Once the support of the student body has been gained, we can then realistically attack the student needs at UNO. However, as long as communications failure persists between the government and the students, the government will continue to serve as a mere figurehead.

We wish to express our thanks to all who have voted and participated in this election; we see your votes not as partisan ballots, but as votes in support of effective Student Government at UNO. With enough active interest by the student body, the Student Government can and will be effective in helping to manage and direct the affairs of this school.

Schwartz — McCormick

by Rusty Schwartz

When the editor of the Gateway offered comment space to each of the candidates, a fleeting impulse to make some negative comments about certain campaign practices occurred to me.

However, I have seen the effects of negative attitudes, especially on this campus, and I personally feel such comments will never serve a purpose.

Instead, this letter will attempt to call for what I believe are necessary election reforms. Specifically, I propose the following changes:

— Elections should be held earlier, perhaps in mid-February, with those newly-elected taking office sometime in mid-April. The two month interval would be valuable in establishing some continuity.

— Student President, Vice-President, and Student Senate elections should be held at the same time. The present situation, with these elections being two weeks apart, is confusing and frustrating to most students. Also, with these elections being held at the same time, more interest could be generated as there would be more people campaigning.

As stated previously, these changes would lend continuity, generate increased interest, and perhaps solve the most critical problem — voter turn-out. Some of the changes made for this year's election will cause a larger voter turn-out than last year, but reforms outlined above will make the current election system more responsive.

— Finally, I want to take this time to thank Carol Strother, the election commissioner, for an outstanding effort in the face of some extremely difficult constraints. I also want to thank those who helped to make Student Government more responsive to student needs this year.

DAY CARE

known at this time) on a walk-on basis. The forum is scheduled in the MBSC ballroom Wednesday, April 11 at noon.

The need for day care, in terms of numbers, has never been accurately assessed here. An abortive effort was made over a year ago by student senator J. C. Casper to glean necessary statistics.

According to Dr. Elaine Hess, assistant professor of sociology, the questionnaire was poorly administered. "We can't successfully administer an in-class survey," she insisted, "because the students feel bogged down by the constant barrage of such questionnaires during class time."

"I don't believe we have any idea of the potential participants in a child care program," she emphasized.

Student President Rusty Schwartz, after hearing about a National Take Your Child To Work Day on April 10, hopes the student senate will endorse a similar strategy — a Take Your Child To School Day — to "demonstrate the drastic need for day care."

UNO Chancellor Ronald Roskens has delegated responsibility for the day care dilemma to his executive assistant Dr. Timothy Sheehy, a member of the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women.

Sheehy called a meeting of clergymen from five nearby churches in January and requested that they make cost estimates for renovating their facilities to comply with health and fire requirements.

Ms. Mezell, who met with Sheehy before spring break, said that the administrator told her that the only church that has shown any interest is the First Christian Church at 66th and Dodge. Necessary renovations were figured at around $5,050 to accommodate 20-35 children.

The question of using university and student fee monies to fund day care operations is a "touchy one," says Sheehy.

Schwartz feels that student fees, whose immediate future may be determined by the outcome of LB 362, could possibly be jeopardized by supporting day care at this point.

He suggests that some sort of student government cooperative be organized with proceeds going towards a project like day care. He cited one of the two UNL day care centers as an example. The student government there (ASUN) helps support their center by income generated from programs such as student insurance. This way revenue, and not fee money, is spent.

Some students and faculty have approached Head Start administrators for partial funding. Marv McNeff, coordinator of the youth program, considers funding from Head Start dollars impossible and suggests requesting money from the Office of Child Development, revenue sharing funds, and state and federal vocational rehabilitation.

Much of the needed funding would revolve around the necessity of numerous staff members. McNeff would like to see university-related programs such as NOVA, Cooperative Education, and work-study involved in the staffing efforts.

There is also a strong possibility that the departments of education, psychology, and home economics may be interested in participating in the child development aspects of such a program.

Summer Jobs

UNO students interested in summer employment are encouraged to consider becoming Nebraska Vacation Guides for the 1973 tourist season.

The Vacation Guide Program, sponsored by the State's Tourism Division in the Department of Economic Development, is aimed primarily at students participating in Nebraska college and university work-study programs, but all applicants will be considered.

Nebraska Vacation Guides are employed from June through August and work at information booths at rest stops along Interstate 80 from Gretna to Ogallala.

Interviews for these positions will be conducted on Friday, April 13, from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Interested students should sign up for an interview time in the Office of Financial Aid and Student Employment, Room 240 Administration.

These are just a few of the summer employment opportunities available to students eligible for the work-study program. Others include jobs with non-profit agencies in the community such as the Boys Clubs, Christ Child Society, YMCA, Douglas County Extension, and several others. There are both full time and part time jobs available. Interested students should contact Mrs. James in the Office of Financial Aid and Student Employment by May 1.

Anderson Seeks Truth in Gov't

By Anne Prettl

Jack Anderson, 1972 Pulitzer prize winner for Journalism, and a leading syndicated columnist called the Watergate Incident "... the worst scandal I've seen in 25 years of reporting," in a press conference shortly before he addressed students at Creighton University's Brandeis Hall Monday night.

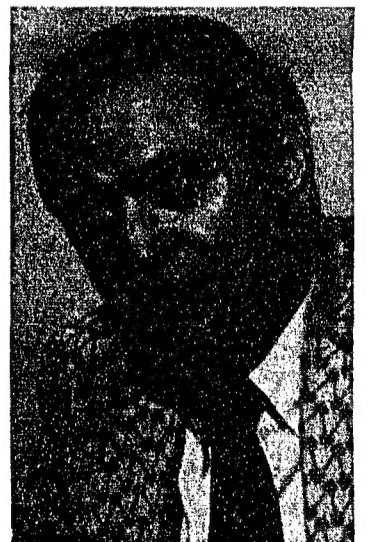

"It's nice to speak into a microphone you can see," was Anderson's opening remark, referring to his most recent dealings with the Watergate affair.

He told students people like Ronald Ziegler are no longer believed in Washington, as a result of his reporting. "... Not even when he tells the truth," Anderson added smiling.

Anderson drew widespread public attention to himself for the first time in 1971 during the ITT conspiracy in which ITT officers reportedly pledged a large sum of money to the Republican Convention for a favorable settlement by the Justice Department on a pending anti-trust suit. In his speech, Anderson labeled ITT as "a fat conglomerate, swollen beyond comprehension from gobbling up all of the independent corporations around the world."

Says Anderson, a reporter is not going to learn the true facts from a government spokesman because the spokesman will tell him only what the President orders him to tell reporters. It is more important for the reporter to find out the facts beforehand and have them ready before questioning Washington authorities he said.

Anderson said that the Anderson ... "can't trust them."

President is not always responsible for what happens in national politics. He could not believe that a President would knowingly violate the laws of the United States, but added that should it be proved that a president of the U.S. did knowingly advise, and consent to an unjust and unlawful act, the American people would have the right to impeach the President for his actions.

According to Anderson, John F. Kennedy was one of his most admired presidents because he had the courage to face the American public after the Bay of Pigs crisis, and take full responsibility for its outcome.

He gave students insight into some of the hypocrisy of Presidential campaigns, and intimated that if reporters could dig out some of the truth before elections, the outcome of elections would be greatly altered, and to the benefit of American democracy.

Anderson highlighted the human aspect of reporting, and politics — and ended by saying, a reporter's best policy is "You can't trust them."

Numerical Support Necessary

The two factors that all of the executive candidates have stressed are increased student involvement and better vertical communication between the students and the student government.

Both elements are much needed. Their inclusion in the campaign platforms indicate an admission and a recognition that the lack of these input factors has been a serious deterrent to the efficacy of student representation.

With the present level of support, there is little muscle in the resolutions of the student senate or the work of the executives. There is little stopping, or even slowing, of the actions of Varner or Roskens or Beer when an unfavorable administrative decision has been reached. The best our student representatives can do is vent their anger through lengthy debates and powerless resolutions in their bi-monthly group therapy sessions.

There is no real legitimacy to the powers of student government. Legitimacy, on the surface, is most easily and most often measured solely on the basis of numerical support. The evidence of this support or lack of support is most often, in turn, measured by the evaluation of election returns.

On a campus of near 13,000 eligible voters, a turnout of 15% is not an impressive statement on the support for student involvement in university policy making. It is easier for the administration to ignore student government when it is upset with some policy since they know they are safe from a popular uprising of student protest. They can choose instead the time and place where student input is best adaptable to serve as supportive evidence for approval of their actions.

This boils down to the point that, when a policy is made that is not in the general student interest, the student government does not have enough support to stand on its own as a legitimate opposition. It is therefore, too often ignored.

To measure the importance of student government in the terms of numbers alone is not in reality a fair determinant. If the Board of Regents would base their legitimacy on the basis of their electoral support, they would find themselves owning the vote of a mere morsel of their total constituency.

It will, however, remain to be the easiest way for all who want to discredit student input to belittle the power and influence of student government.

That's why it is important that you take the time to cast a vote today if you have not already done so. Whoever wins will have the responsibility to draw more of the student body into the activities of student government through improved communication. But now, a few minutes from each of us to vote will help to insure a more productive use of time and energy by those who are elected for the coming year.

Hurry, the polls are open only until 1:30 p.m.

Individual, Not Pen and Sword

It still appears odd that the president of Pen and Sword, Johnie Wilson, would make a personal endorsement of fellow bootstrapper Dave Parker's candidacy for student president by using Pen and Sword letterhead paper, an official Pen and Sword seal on his signature, and the Pen and Sword bulk mail permit to distribute this personal endorsement.

If the entire organization had voted to endorse a certain candidate, then the use of those facilities would have been appropriate. But when an individual abuses the name of the entire organization by unauthorized use of its official materials for spreading his own personal opinion, a distinction between the individual and the rest of the group's membership should be made.

Deferred Payment Policy

All students, both resident and non-resident, may take advantage of the deferred payment program at UNO. Students may put $\frac{3}{4}$ of their total tuition and fees on deferred payment, paying a \$5 service charge for this privilege. At the time he/she registers, the student must pay \$75 or total tuition and fees, whichever is less. He/she may pay the remainder upon receiving a bill or may choose to put $\frac{3}{4}$ of his/her tuition and fees on deferred payment.

Should he/she choose the deferred payment plan, the student must go to the Financial Aid Office, Room 240, Administration Bldg., and make arrangements for payment. Payment must begin not later than one month after the beginning of the semester for which the loan is taken out and must be paid in full before the beginning of final exams.

For example, a full time resident student, registering for 15 credit hours is charged a total of $300 for tuition and fees. He/she pays $75 at the time he/she registers and chooses to put the rest on deferred payment, arranging to pay in four payments, two $60 payments and two $55 payments.

Registration and payment schedules are as follows: Early Registration, April 16-20, payment of $75 or total tuition and fees, whichever is less at this time or before June 25. If payment is not received by June 25, the student's class cards will be returned. Open Registration, July 5-August 10; Regular Registration, August 22-23. At the time of registration, payment of $75 or total tuition and fees, whichever is less, is required.

NOTE: If the student has a university loan or deferred payment that has not been paid, it must be paid before he is eligible for another loan or deferred payment. All deferred payments must be paid in the semester in which they are taken out.

Students who receive financial assistance (scholarships, grants, waivers, or loans) from UNO may use this money in lieu of the $75 partial payment but must make total payment according to the previously mentioned deadlines, or set up a deferred payment program if the financial assistance awarded by UNO does not meet the total cost of tuition and fees. Students who are awarded financial assistance after they have already paid their tuition and fees in part or in full will be eligible for a refund. For further information on obtaining the refund, contact the Financial Aid Office.

All students are required to pick up their authorization (scholarship order) for financial assistance in the Financial Aid Office, just prior to the time they go to the cashier to make payment for their tuition and fees. It is the student's responsibility to initiate this action.

IMPRESSIONS cinema

OF CINEMA:

The Emigrants . . . a series of beginnings.

The Emigrants

"The Emigrants" is a film which follows the emigration of Swedish people to America c. 1850. It describes the types of people who were willing to make this move and their motives for leaving Sweden. The Swedish director, Jan Troell, tries desperately to make the audience feel what the emigrants feel. He does this through the creation of powerful images and symbols which point up the persecution of these people.

The rock is an example of a symbol which dominates Troell's image of the Swedish land. Rocks symbolize the futility of the struggle to farm in Sweden. The more the farmers exhume the rocks, the more rocks there are to exhume. Consequently, Troell shows us rocks: large rocks, small rocks, piles and walls of rocks. The rocks are a nuisance by the simple virtue of their presence above the ground. But some of the worst rocks lay just below the surface of the ground to break the plows of the poor farmers. On one occasion, an unusually belligerent rock attacks an unsuspecting farmer by falling on him. More rocks? Why not? Flat rocks — round rocks — pebbles, stones, and boulders. When this film is reviewed by someone else, he can discuss Troell's fascination for shoes and feet, though the rocks are by no means exhausted.

The film's great strength lies in characterization. It is loaded with vivid characters. Three of these characters should be classified as major: Karl O Skar, who is dissatisfied with the land; Christina, his beautiful wife; and Robert, his younger brother. The roles of these characters bear an amazing resemblance to those played in John Ford's 1936 film version of "The Grapes of Wrath."

The roles of Karl O Skar played by Max von Sydow and that of Tom Joad played by Henry Fonda are so similar one would question the originality of the former. In both cases, the persecuted people are forced from their land by their masters and by nature.

Careful study of "The Emigrants" however, reveals a lack of some essential qualities which exist in "The Grapes of Wrath." After two hours of living, loving, and dying with these people, one feels that we should perhaps cry with them or laugh with them, but the sad fact is that we are not with them. Henry Fonda never emerges. By this I mean that there is no central character through whom we see the lives of the emigrants. The film is viewed too much through the eyes of the director and not enough through those of a central character. The final product does not draw the audience into the action. When all the symbols and close-ups and clever camera and sound techniques are boiled away, we are left with a documentary. The film is an objective picture of emigration to America.

At the end of the film the director confesses that this is only the beginning. The audience is then instructed to return at a later date to see a sequel to "The Emigrants" which will show how the Swedes live in their new land. "The Emigrants" is a series of beginnings for the major characters. It is a two hour introduction in which character is developed but conflict is not adequately resolved.

Perhaps this film should not be judged alone. Perhaps we should withhold our criticism until the sequel has been viewed. But then again, any film nominated for the honor of "Best Picture" by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences should be able to stand alone.

This film has terrific potential. It could introduce a brilliant film or series of films about the characters which were so carefully drawn. Let us hope it is a brilliant introduction to future cinema which merits the praise "The Emigrants" has already received.

EAR WAX

by Gary McKee

This past month witnessed the release of albums by Johnny Winter, Roy Buchanan, and Jeff Beck; all three guitarists with a cult of fans that would like to see their respective hero take over the role of THE SUPER-GUITAR HONCHO OF ROCK, a title vacated by the combination of the deaths of Duane Allman and Jimi Hendrix, and the now-apparent semi-retirement of Eric Clapton. Thus all three albums have been a long time coming, as far as the worshippers are concerned.

The Johnny Winter sect will likely be the most satisfied. "Still Alive and Well" is not only attractively packaged and well-engineered, but it also is pervaded throughout by Johnny's obvious delight at being back in his element again after his heroin addiction and psychological problems. He proves once more that he is one of the best electric bottle-neck players around; and indeed, all his solos on the album have bite and tension. Even his singing sounds more confident and at ease.

There's nothing startlingly new or unexpected from Johnny here; but he's got his stuff down cold now, and his renewed enthusiasm and drive infuse the entire set. There are no weak cuts or filler here. His back-up rhythm section, and Rick Deringer on occasional guitar, are as sharp as you'd want them to be, and the material, from Winter originals to the Jagger-Richard numbers, is solid from start to finish.

Boy Buchanan's second offering seems to suffer for the apparent reason than makes the Winter release a success. Roy may be technically the best guitarist of the three, but his playing still lacks any noticeable passion.

His first album was generally lacking in personal direction, a problem I'd hoped would be solved with this second effort, but not so. Roy still doesn't appear to know what he's after. All-to-conventional country-western, slow jam, and blues licks are delivered on different cuts, and the resultant hodge-podge suffers from the lack of any real content. His fans will argue that Roy's just "mellow," or that he's too good to be tied to one type of music, but that explanation doesn't solve the problem. It's not impossible for a guitarist to retain individuality (style) and at the same time demonstrate progression.

Buchanan's troubles are not alleviated in the least by his faceless back-up band, or the bland vocals. You're not going to get me to say that Buchanan isn't good, cuz the dude can play, but so far in the two albums he hasn't burned any holes in the sky. It remains to be seen if he ever will.

I have mixed emotions about "Beck, Bogart and Appice." The first rumors of Beck joining up with two members of Cactus, a band that did little but create noise pollution, filled me with the apprehension that this new group might be yet another heavy-metal "killer" (and God knows we don't need that).

Oddly, this album at times goes the opposite direction. Side one starts off with a flourish — "Black Cat Moan," featuring some rare bottle-necking by Jeff, and a good arrangement. "Lady" is passable, but "Oh to Love You?" I didn't want any Black Sabbath nonsense, but B, B & A sound like they're cutting in on Bread's territory with this one.

The infamous "Superstition" rounds out the side, though, and it's almost as good as I'd hoped it'd be. This is the song that Jeff and Stevie Wonder had the reputed hard feelings over, and I was afraid we'd never get to hear this band's version. Led by Jeff's spicy guitar work and yet another excellent arrangement, they manage to create an effective mood that does the song justice.

Side two leaves me just slightly deflated. There's no one cut as insipid as "Oh to Love You," but a couple come close. I guess I keep waiting for Beck to step out with a solo that'll fry my brains, but he remains maddeningly restrained. Jeff reportedly is uncharacteristically content with his recent aggregation, and possibly is consciously not dominating like he could, but hell, how many people would buy this album to hear Bogart and Appice alone?

I personally feel that Jeff is the most important guitarist of the three I've discovered, and it may seem strange to say it, in view of how long he's been around and some of the stuff he's turned out, but I still don't think he's reached his potential. However, unlike Buchanan, Beck may.

TROLLEY: A Musical Review

Omaha's "music" talent has become stagnant. Local nightclubs and dances frequently proclaim the epithets of the many colorless bands we have all come to know by heart. Local bands are becoming old local bands, and the old local bands are fast becoming even older. Why? They're all afraid to do something creative at their own expense. They'd all rather just imitate. Unfortunately, no new local talent has shown its face in Omaha for quite some time. At least not til now! Omaha's deus ex machina is here — "Trolley" has rolled into town.

"Trolley" is an eight piece rock ensemble, organized only six months ago. What's so new and unique about that? Creativity is the word for it! "Trolley" is unafraid to create at their own economic risk, and is not satisfied merely to imitate. The band has several original tunes already worked up which most all the members have contributed to, but they're not concerned with making them overnight hits or making some quick cash. Rather, they are hoping to impress you with their talents.

"Trolley's" musicians are virtually all new in the business, save one, although all contribute to writing the charts. As a rule however, young musicians generally don't make it in the trade immediately, as "experience" is the prerequisite to success. Nevertheless, "Trolley" is already making their nightclub debut this week at the "Aquarius," proving that talent compensates for experience.

"Trolley" however, is not yet totally "tight," but is still exceptional for a band of their experience.

Carl Jonas, who lives and writes in Omaha, and teaches occasionally at UNO, has written a book entitled The Sputnik Rapist. It deals with, among other things, the "animals in the zoo" at Gateway U, a loosely disguised UNO, located in Gateway City, Omaha, with the title event, the rape, taking place in Morningglory Park, alias Memorial Park.

Draped in all the trappings and frills of an 18th Century picaresque novel, with the mistaken identities of 19th Century English novels, and the old-fashioned disputed inheritance, Riley McCollough, our "classic picaresque protagonist," discovers himself while stumbling through the year 1957.

Beseiged by the Russians ience. As performers, "Trolley's" showmanship is unique. They don't just play their music, they act it out! Their spontaneous routines and interactions are evidence of the way these musicians feel about the music that they play.

A bit "shy" about performing all of their original numbers, "Trolley" also uses tunes from other artists such as Chicago, Buddy Miles, Grand Funk, War, and others. The imitations however, are enhanced with appreciable "Trolley" ad libs, and a well conducted light show.

Trolley is: Rick Dahrir — guitar, vocals; Ron Webster — lead vocals, percussion; Joe Vecchio — bass, vocals; Tim Klusaw — drums; Dave Downs — trumpet, percussion, vocals; Terry Brei — trumpet, percussion; Karl Chernak — tenor sax, woodwinds, percussion; and Tim Fettin — trombone, keyboards, and percussion.

"Trolley" is a new band, guaranteed, in time, to evolve into an outstanding local group. The band's creative ability is unmistakably its trademark.

It's a good book, a fun book, an enjoyable book. The Sputnik Rapist is worth reading and if and when you're between Hemingway themes with nothing else to do, why not?

Creighton-UNO Vie Saturday

UNO, beginning what coach Virgil Yelkin calls their "regular season," takes on Omaha-rival Creighton University Saturday afternoon.

The Mavericks, who split with the Bluejays last season, will be looking for their fifth straight win in the 1:30 p.m. double-header at Papillion's Fricke Field.

Yelkin has nominated senior righthanders Gary Walker and Rick Vuagniaux as the starters against Creighton, who carried an 11-4 mark into a Thursday doubleheader.

Vuagniaux, the leading winner on the Mavericks with a 3-1 mark, has a 2.30 ERA in 23 2/3 innings of work.

Walker, 0-1, has the lowest ERA on the squad, a sparkling 1.20 in 15 innings of work.

"We're through with experimenting," Yelkin said. "We're starting what I consider our regular season and we're looking for wins."

Yelkin indicated a temporary lineup against Creighton would consist of Jack Medick or Tim Porter at first base, Dave Ksiazek at second, Gary Sova at shortstop, and Gary Haney or Medick at third base.

In the outfield will be Al Eckley in left, Curt Peterson in center and Jim Hercinger in right. Steve Knott will handle the catching chores.

Yelkin considered the recent spring trip which netted the Mavericks a 4-7 record "a fine trip against some very good competition."

"We could have easily come back with the record reversed," he noted. "We had a lot of extra-inning and close games on the trip."

Yelkin was pleased with the majority of his pitchers, citing the staff's 1.99 ERA as a "pleasant surprise."

"The lack of outdoor work before the trip definitely hurt our hitting (.202 team batting average). We also thought our defense was sub-par at times."

He commented that the Mavericks will be "working to strengthen both areas" in the second season.

The veteran Maverick coach was pleased with the play of two of his freshmen, Gary Haney and Rick Bernstien from Omaha Benson. "Both showed they will be playing alot of ball for us."

HANEY

Bernstien saw action on the mound, at third and in right field on the trip. He has a .250 average and a 2.25 ERA in 16 innings of work.

Haney, also seeing action at third and right plus a stint at shortstop, has a .190 average, which is sixth best on the squad.

Yelkin said that while he had not seen Creighton play this year, "That we know they have a good squad."

"Just to look at their roster and see the type of players they've recruited lately (the Bluejays roster includes players from Minnesota, California and Arizona) and you know they are going after good ball players."

The designated-pinch-hitter rule, which was recommended by the NAIA to its member schools will not be used against the Bluejays as it is a Creighton home game.

BERNSTIEN

But, in all other Mavericks home contests and the post-season NAIA tourneys, the designated hitter rule will be used, Yelkin said.

Kearney Relays Attracts Runners

By Dave Coulton

UNO's trackmen will make their outdoor season debut Saturday afternoon at the Kearney Relays. The W Club Invitational was to be the first outing but bad weather postponed it twice to an undetermined date.

Even if it's not the first meet for the Mavericks they would like to avenge an indoor loss against host team Kearney State. The Kearney Antelopes were the only team to beat the Mavericks in the field house.

Other schools expected to compete will be Doane, who UNO beat in a close quadrangular meet during the indoor season, Hastings, Wayne State, and Peru State.

The meet will feature seven relays, five of which UNO has entered. The Mavericks will have men in the 440 relay, mile relay, two-mile relay, sprint medley relay and distance medley relay.

There will also be seven field events and three individual running events.

Lance Herold will once again face Kearney's Jack Soukup in the two mile walk. Herold has finished behind Soukup in two previous races.

Frank Borowiak will run the 440 intermediate hurdles while Jack Schroer and John Hawkins will run the mile steeple chase.

Doane's Dan Cooke is the favorite in both weight events but could be challenged by UNO's ever-improving corp of shot putters and discus throwers. Bob Buchta is the Mavericks best hope.

The high jump should be fiercely contested. Pat Phillips of Doane has on of the best jumps in the state this year as he cleared 6-8 1/2 during the indoor season. Right behind him are Tom Schrad and Tim Newberry both of UNO, clearing 6-8 indoors.

Keith Nuttleman of Kearney could be the darkhorse as he has edged Schrad and Newberry in indoor competition.

The mile relay looks to be the most exciting of the relay events. Both Doane and Kearney have beaten UNO's team indoors. But both losses were by a few feet and the Mavericks will be competitive in this one.

Kearney should also provide strong competition in the two-mile relay. UNO, NAIA national indoor champ in this event, is the meet favorite in the event.

Last year, the Maverick runners won four events in the rain and cold at Kearney.

The relays should also give UNO coaches Lloyd Cardwell and Jim McMahon some indication of who will be ready for the nationally-prestigious Kansas and Drake Relays later this month.

Entries into both fields are fiercely contested for as high minimum standards in each event has to be reached before an entry is accepted.

The Kearney Relays will be held on the Kearney campus with the field events beginning at 1 p.m. and the running portion of the show at 1:30.

Linemen Best-Conditioned Group at Spring Drills

Last season, UNO football coach Al Caniglia felt that the offensive line was perhaps the weakest position on the Mavericks' 8-2 grid squad.

This spring, the veteran coach believes that the interior linemen are perhaps the "best conditioned group at spring practice."

"We're very happy with the condition the linemen showed up in," Caniglia said. "We also have more depth in the line which should really help."

Caniglia credits the weight-training program the veterans were using during the off season as the reason for their physical fitness.

In fact, Al said "you can see a visible difference in the condition of the vets and the newcomers. All the veterans are in the best shape they could be — obviously, they have worked hard in the off season."

But the added conditioning has really shown in the offensive line.

Guard, Mike Giancaspro and tackle, Dale Rubesh are both down in weight and this has helped both of them, Caniglia feels.

"Jim Kros has looked good from the move from center to tackle despite playing at around 240. John Thomsen added 15 pounds and is playing well at 205 in the center spot."

"I believe that this is the best shape that the linemen have ever shown up in."

It is perhaps good that the linemen worked to cut any excess weight because Caniglia is firm on one point. No one will play for UNO next year if he is carrying any excessive weight.

"Everyone who will play will play at a weight where he can run. Everyone will have to get down and those that don't won't play."

"We view weight as an asset if the individual can carry a large amount of weight and is still able to move. Too much weight and no movement is a deficit to our plans."

Caniglia plans to change little from the past years but will add a "belly" series for the fullback that was left out of last season's plans.

"This formation will spread the ball carrying around. Never again, unless its absolutely necessary, will we rely on one person to carry the ball."

"We are developing two or three good I backs and the same number of fullbacks. Carrying the ball will be divided around among the best of them."

"We'll also do more running and throwing off the play-action pass that will tend to freeze a defense."

Fundamentals are being stressed in the first two weeks of spring drills. Caniglia said that both offensive and defensive basics will be learned before frills will be added.

"What we're really doing is working on the meat of our offense and the meat of our defense. We're building on the basics we need to make ourselves a good football team."

Caniglia said that while the number of recruits who have committed themselves to UNO is up almost 8-1 over past years, he is still looking for a number of players to fill key positions.

"We can always use another good back but I believe that we've filled most of our needs on the offensive line."

What Al would really like is a sprinter-type receiver who "could add a new dimension to our passing game."

In addition, UNO will be looking to the junior college ranks for defensive linemen to add depth to the front four.

The defensive line could give Caniglia problems on just trying to decide who'll play there. Five lettermen return to the front four, including three-year letterman end Tom Shawhan.

"Shawhan could become a key leader of our defense," Al said.

Larry Michael and Ted Sledge are filling the tackle slots while Mickey Woodside, a non-starting letterman, is "improving with each practice."

John Whelton is awaiting a doctor's OK to get into scrimmage.

Whelton, who underwent surgery after last fall's fifth game due to a ruptured ligament in his knee, has been working out. But scrimmage duty up to now has been taboo as the doctors was making sure John had strengthened the knee to where it could hold up under the stress of scrimmage type situations.

"When John is ready to go, we could actually start a very experienced front four by moving him into a tackle spot and moving Michael, who is quick enough, to the other defensive end position."

More will be learned about who will play in what position before spring drills end with the annual Alumni-Varsity game on April 28.

Caniglia said that the game's site has not been chosen but will be in the near future.
